

The Masons' Apron

The first Apron you had, was the skin of a Lamb, Pure and white and new,
it typified friendship and innocence,
an honourable Apron for you.

Then soon, it was time to divest you of that as you passed to the Second Degree.
An Apron adorned now, with two blue rosettes,
On a Craftsman, for Masons to see.

Your studies extended to Nature and Science.
You wished that the days would then hasten, to bring you that last, greatest trial of all and the Apron of a full Master Mason.

Look at it now its white and it's blue there's two tassels with chains, but why?
count those chains, you'll find there are 7 and to explain them more, I will try.

The tassels represent the tassels that tied the aprons of Masons of old.
two were the columns that stood at the Porch of King Solomon's Temple we're told

The seven chains attached to each Tassel,
The number of Stars You see here (points to the 1st Degree Tracing Board)
The Number of Masons to make a Lodge perfect,
The Chains have a meaning, that's clear.

7 spheres on the end, 7 planets they knew.
Mercury, Venus, Earth to sustain us and in the night sky, beyond earth's orbit, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus.

They could represent God's Rainbows, seven colours you find and then there are seven days, to complete a week, or the seven ages of man.

When time has rolled by, in a few years or so it might just be you sitting there (point to Worshipful Master's Pedestal) you can see that this Apron is different (point to Master's Apron) it's the Apron that all Masters wear.

It has three levels, there's no rosettes and a badge with a Level too, so now, I ask you this question will this Apron, one day, be on you ?

if you go in the Chair, this Apron you'll wear, then some years after that, I reckon another one, like the one he wears, (point to Provincial Officer) As Provincial Honours will beckon another Apron, befitting the Rank and the Badge of the Office they hold a darker blue and still the white, with Braid, Chains and Levels of Gold.

Look at the Badge, it will tell you his Rank,
be it Deacon or maybe DC.
There is much to be learned when you look round a Lodge and you study the Aprons you see

Grand Officers wear a special one and a collar embroidered in gold.
You'll know it when you see one,
You won't even have to be told.

So, if you're perplexed by the Aprons of Masons and the differences of what you've seen.
This short explanation will help you, I hope,
of the Aprons and just what they mean.
